Subject: Andamooka Gem natural Quartz & Boulder Beads OFFER 22 Jun 2011

Today we have something very special to offer you, the first three bracelets followed by one most magnificent necklace. I wonder how many of you are looking at the pictures and think this is either boulder opal or black opal. These are very unique and if you think they are boulder or black you are wrong. They are Andamooka gem natural Quartz, it is opal which has gone through the quartz stone. Honestly I wouldn't have known the difference myself if I hadn't actually owned the rock that these had been cut from. Again I would stress this is natural opal, it is not treated in any way. It was a thick rock that was choc a block full of colour from one side to the other. I really don't know whether I like the strand or the large bracelet best, probably the strand.

I am really excited by the Andamooka Quartz, if you like something different, particularly if you like one off things, these are for you. Collectors might also like to have some so they have something that is quite different and unique as I have said. My friend has another one of these natural quartz stones full of opal colour but he wants an arm and a leg for it, I am still working on him.

To go with today's offer we have two strands of Boulder opal beads. You will note they have the same browns but it have opal running through them in bars rather than right through the whole of the stones as the Andamooka Quartz has.

17. $1,495 IMG_8912 Boulder Opal 8-12mm round 292cts

18. $1,495 IMG_8913 Boulder Opal 8-12mm round 292cts

19. $2,950 IMG_8916 Boulder Opal 12-14mm round 540cts

There are a couple of bracelets here also from a natural rock with colours running through them, they are not as brilliant but very nice and very very affordable. One is really brown 12mm round 138cts $138, the other is brown and white also 12mm round 136cts for only $136. If you look into the stone you'll also see reds in some of those stones. You could break these bracelets up and match them in with other beads or use them as focal beads because they are so large, there are lots of possibilities for very little money.
