We have just come into possession of two opals that were set in antique jewellery, we think in the 1930's.

The first is a Lightning Ridge Blue Green 28mm x 24mm set in 9k gold, I think it's approximately 30cts but we haven't taken it out of its setting to weigh it. There is a natural white line going through the stone and at one end of the stone there is a little bit of patch but overall your eye doesn't go to it. This can be used as a pin or a pendant as there's a small loop that would take a very small chain. When my wife first saw it she thrust her hand with a beautiful black opal ring on it to see which one was best and she had to look closely to make that determination. If this stone alone were on the market today in the Ridge I wouldn't think it would be anything less than $5,000, it's a beautiful thing. We are able to offer it to you today for a mere $1,250, I am proud to be able to offer my clients such a stone.

The second magnificent piece of antique jewellery is a pin brooch with an Andamooka Super Gem set with small diamonds. Now not a lot of people use pins today and if we were into jewellery we would just take the stone in its setting and make it into a ring. The stone measures approximately 15mm x 10mm, probably about 6cts. Because of the age, 1930's, there was some magnificent opal coming out of Andamooka and this is as good as any. I can highly recommend this piece to you for only $1,495.

Remember Christmas is just around the corner and who better than you to have a lovely Christmas gift.
