Hi Folk

Here's something that's very very unique, faceted opal, they look like diamonds but of course are nowhere near as expensive, take a look at these. Personally I like them and I would rather spend money on opals than thousands and thousands on diamonds, there is more colour in the worst opals than in a diamond in my opinion.

These have been cut from Australian Opal Mines rough opal by one of our very valued clients. We don't normally resell opals that we have sold in the rough but these pieces are particularly beautiful and most unusual because very few opals are faceted.

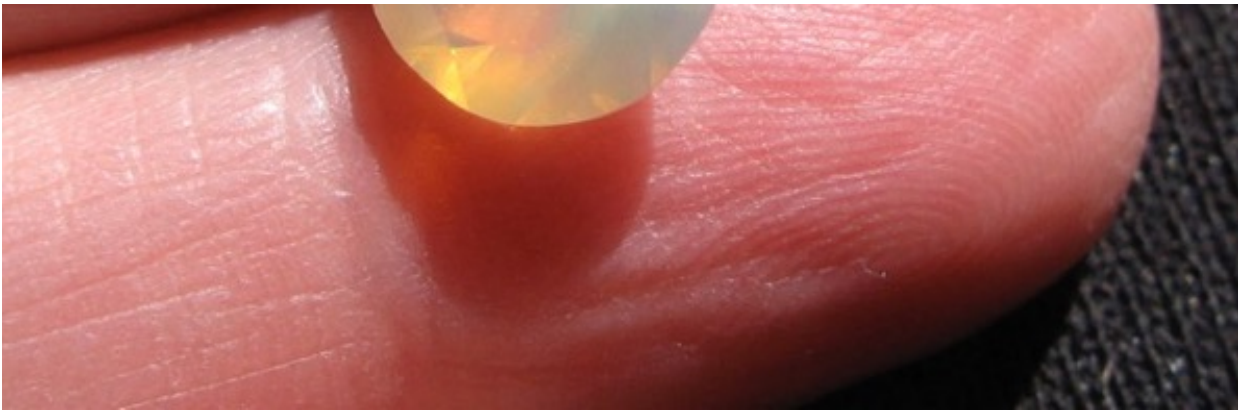

#24, 25, 26, 28 & 29 are absolutely brilliant. It's hard to say which one is best. If you fancy these please don't hesitate because once they are gone they are gone. Our mate has purchased nearly all of our faceting opal so I can't guarantee that there will be any more. It is very rare to find opals that lend themselves to faceting, they have to be the right density etc, you don't like to be cutting into big stones just to make smaller stones.

If you are a collector I suggest you buy one of these rare stones for your collection, if you are a lover of opal I suggest you buy one and have it set. You won't have anyone walking past in the street with a faceted opal I can guarantee that. The prices are ridiculously inexpensive and I can highly recommend them to you.
