Years ago when we were mining at Andamooka somehow I came across a magnificent super gem piece of Andamooka Matrix opal. For years it sat in one of our safes. Over twelve months ago I came across the stone, put it on my desk and each day looked at it and that is a very soothing pleasant experience. You can see rivers of colour, as you move it the colours change. Las Vegas and it's brilliant lights have nothing on this stone. It's so interesting, all the rivers shoot up to the top of the stone which become another side. I decided that one day I would have it set which you can see I now have. It was hard to put a price on it. One of my daughters saw it and instantly wanted to claim it for herself but I had just given her a $9,000 opal so I am going to sell this one. It weighs 21.55cts so really for such a beautiful gem at approximately $100/ct it's a beauty, set in 18k gold. I'll be interested to see who buys it.

Recently a lot of antique jewellery was put up in an auction and I secured a Ruby Doublet that weighs 4.15cts or .83 gram, it measures 11mm x 8.5mm. I had never heard of a ruby doublet so I sent the stone off to a very knowledgeable client of mine who facets both sapphires and opal. He says it is a doublet, the top of the stone is different from the bottom of the stone which is probably a synthetic of some sort, I personally can't see it, I doubt that you can. This ruby is a beautiful colour and if it's a solid pigeon blood ruby I don't know how many thousands of dollars it would be per carat. I think it is probably worth $100/ct that would put a price of $1,415 on it however I am happy to let one of our clients have it for only $250. Whoever buys it will receive it in it's original packaging.

Another item came in through an auction where the Rocks Boutique, Sydney had been sold up. It is a beautiful 18k gold ring with 8 small diamonds, a beautiful 8mm x 6mm solid opal gem with a broad flash and a very thick stone, you can see that from the picture that Heather has taken from the side. It's a beautiful piece of jewellery. I imagine it would have been a minimum of $2,250 in the boutique years ago so for $560 it's a snap buy.

Also from the boutique sale we secured a very pretty Malachite barrel bead necklace with spacers in between, there is a gold screw cap but I can't guarantee it is actually gold. It is 17 inches long, 235cts and would not have sold for less than $1,000 in the gallery. It's yours for only $315.

We have others but these can be the buys of the day. Each one is an absolute bargain. If you can afford the Andamooka Matrix opal Super Gem you should snap it up, you'll never see another one like this.
