Today we have something pretty unusual, 7oz Lapis offcuts and small stones for only $10/oz.

There are also some 42.8cts faced and partly shaped stones at only $6/ct that grade for $256 is pretty good value.

There are also 1.5oz tumbled stones, many of them are from Andamooka $152.

There is a huge stone for only $41 from Coober Pedy some Red bars, this stone is nearly as long as your thumb and half as thick. There is one beautiful red bar running through it and I think it's well worth a gamble, if you get one huge stone out of it which I think you will, you will more than double your money on this one, because it's a gem bar, nice reds.

The Mintubi on Sandstone .65oz for only $65 can only be seen from two sides, it's quite thick where it can be seen, this will be more than one stone. The sandstone will be holding a number of smaller stones together but there's a big chance of getting a very nice opal out of here for only $65.

The 1.79oz at $100/oz $179 is very good, the largest stone is huge and has some lovely red running through it.

For those of you who can handle smaller stones, the 1oz Andamooka $125 (24 stones) is also a bargain.

It is not often you get a chance to buy shell pieces, these are what we call "skinny shells", some of them are thick enough to cut nice curved pendants, the strength is in the shape. The others will make fine doublets. Some of you will know how to grind up a compound that fits into the shell and it will end up looking like a solid.

The $171 Mintubi is a beauty, it is a straw pattern. One side is almost skin to skin and the other is a half opal backed with nice coloured patch. You could make a matching set of ring, earrings and pendant out of this stone.

The Mintubi Dark Base $250/oz is really nice, lots of colour as is the $132 Mintubi from the Airport Field. They actually dug up the airport and pegged claims and people drew lots to see which claim they would get, only a few of the claims contained the opal, most of them were barren. This material is beautiful pale colours and well worthy of your time working it.

For people with big fingers and are a little clumsy you can't go wrong with the Coober Pedy stone for $153, it's virtually skin to skin. I have never cut a stone in my life but I could cut this one.

The $341 huge Coober Pedy stone is a ripper, it may be the best value in this whole Offer, it's over 1" long, almost .5" thick and all colours of the rainbow.

The 1.25oz very bright small stones $500 is certainly a cutter's grade, many many opals, very very bright. Priced on 13/5/10, this one slipped through, let it be your luck.

Now for the professionals amongst you the Lambina Black opal for $1,379 is a beautiful stone, it's huge and on one side of the stone it has red on green, on another part of the stone there's the red running through the middle of it. This will cut magnificently, much better than the picture. Anyone who has a dremel will have hours of fun producing the very best from this black. Please remember that Lambina is closed and there will be no more.

The Lambina faceting jelly for $41.52 is worth double that.

The last but certainly not least there are two little Andamooka stones that will go pretty close to matching when they are cut and will make a fine pair of earrings for only $300.

Professional cutters - if there is not enough gem and super gem here for you and you would like to look at some just send us a quick email and I'll pick out some more stones for you.

Meanwhile I am just wondering how many people are going to want to buy this $341 Coober Pedy brilliant reds and greens. I love it and so will you.

Regards

Murray
